Spring Cleaning Your Cyber Life

It's that time of year for the highly anticipated or dreaded, Spring Cleaning! While you may be noticing the cobwebs in your ceiling corners, it's just as important to clean out the digital cobwebs at least once a year.

Data Bugs

Get those pesky and unnecessary files deleted off of your desktop and organize the important ones into folders. Don't forget your download folder, as items seem to multiply quickly in there.

Consider utilizing cloud storage where you don't have to worry about your files being held hostage (Ransomware). Invest in secure backup services and double check that you are up to date on your security software.

Spam Sweep

We all have that junk mail that keeps piling up. Instead of just deleting them, save yourself future time by unsubscribing from all of the non-essential sites. You don't want to open up emails that could be potential threats to your security.

Old Passwords: Bite the Dust

It's time to have new passwords for all of your accounts. Each account should have a different password, and if you have a hard time remembering all of these, try out a (SAFE) online passwords manager. There are a variety available, but make sure to do your research before you choose one.

Squeaky Clean and Smart (Phone)

Similar to your computer, delete any phone apps that you no longer use and make sure all of your photos are uploaded on a cloud based service. Do you have your phone password protected? If not, put one on immediately, or update if it is a numbers-based log in.

Scrub a Dub Devices

Lastly, it may be time to recycle your old gadgets you aren't using any more. Maybe you can make money off these items! If not, it's still a great idea to go through even your oldest devices and scrub them clean of your personal information.

Utilizing these digital decluttering tips, you can start with a clean slate this spring!
