Scams Related to COVID-19

Be aware that criminals are attempting to exploit COVID-19 worldwide through a variety of scams.

- ◆ Be on the lookout for antibody testing fraud schemes. Never share your personal or health information to anyone other than known and trusted medical professionals.
- ◆ Be cautious of unsolicited healthcare fraud schemes through emails, phone calls, or in person contact.
- ◆ Be on the lookout for robocalls making fraudulent offers to sell respiratory masks or other medical devices with no intent of delivery, telephone calls to individuals and entities, including state and local governments, offering the sale of large amounts of Personal Protection Equipment (PPE) and demanding advance payments with no intent of delivery.
- ◆ Look out for sales of counterfeit, tampered, or otherwise fraudulent PPE, including N95 masks, gloves, and surgical gowns.
- ◆ Be aware of unsolicited requests for your Medicare information, even if they are accompanied by offers of "free" COVID-19 tests or supplies, or an email or call by someone claiming to be a representative from Medicare or the Department of Health and Human Services. Scammers may use your Medicare information to submit false medical claims for unrelated, unnecessary, or fictitious services.
- ◆ Be wary of calls claiming you received an overpayment of the stimulus money and demanding a "refund" of the difference. Consumers may be threatened with adverse consequences such as fines, forfeiture, or arrest if they refuse to refund the money. Callers may demand payments by stored value cards, such as iTunes, Google play, or Steam cards, or by money transmission such as Western Union or MoneyGram.

Find out more about these scams and how to protect yourself by visiting fbi.gov/coronavirus and the FTC at FTC.gov/coronavirus.

Criminals will likely continue to use new methods to exploit COVID-19 worldwide. Stay alert and stay informed about common fraud schemes related to the COVID-19 Pandemic.
